James Bornemeier
Executive News Editor/Metro

Metro News Editors and Copy Editors:

As I start my new job on the City Desk, there's a couple of things I want to say.

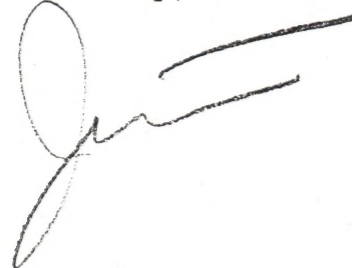

The first is a simple "thank you" for all the hard work you put in during the years that I've been executive news editor.

A lot is asked of the metro copy and news desks. The daily crunch-time around here is as arduous and challenging as anywhere in the building, and no crew handles the pressure better. You routinely pull off miracles.

Second, I will miss working with you. We have gone through some remarkable changes in personnel and procedures, and through it all you got the job done with professionalism and flair.

I look forward to many friendly encounters with you in the future.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in dark ink, appearing to be 'J. Bornemeier', with a large loop at the start and a long horizontal stroke at the end.

DATE: December 13, 1990

FROM: Noel Greenwood

SUBJECT: Staff Change

TO: Metro Desk and
Copy Desk

Steve Mitchell has been named Metro Executive News Editor, succeeding Jim Bornemeier, who is joining the City Desk as an editor there.

Steve will assume his new duties immediately, and will be responsible for all Metro news desk and copy desk operations.

DATE: March 22, 1990
FROM: George Cotliar
SUBJECT: Abortion Terminology
TO: Editorial Staff

Effective immediately, we are changing Times style on abortion terminology in ways I hope will bring greater precision and fairness to our coverage of an emotionally charged debate.

The most obvious change involves use of the term "pro-choice," which no longer will be acceptable as a description of those who favor maintaining legal access to abortion. The preferred terms will be "abortion rights advocates," "supporters of legal abortion," "those who favor abortion rights" and the like.

It will not be acceptable to refer to "abortion advocates" or to describe this side of the debate as "pro-abortion." In fact, many such activists personally oppose abortions but simply think women should legally have the option to have one.

Since 1982 we have rejected the term "pro-life" to describe those opposed to abortion. That prohibition remains. This side of the debate should be described as "opponents of abortion," "abortion foes" or "anti-abortion."

The usual exceptions for proper names and terms used in direct quotations continue to apply.

I realize that these changes will complicate the already difficult task of headline writing. But they are necessary to ensure that Times coverage of the volatile issue remains dispassionate, fair and accurate.

Style & Usage Report

November, 1984

If you are not familiar with a foreign language, you are better off not trying to use it. The misuse of a foreign language in our paper is an insult to those who speak it, and it makes The Times look both ignorant and foolish. (The Times' library has a number of dictionaries of foreign languages, and there are quite a few editorial staffers who are fluent in French and Spanish; there are also many foreign consulates in Los Angeles and many college and university departments of foreign languages.)

Here are a few examples of misuse over the last few months:

- haute monde* (National). The French haute is feminine, monde is masculine; therefore: haut monde.
- aux Moulin Rouge* (View). The French aux is plural, moulin singular; therefore: au Moulin Rouge.
- aux mousseline* (Travel). The French aux is plural, mousseline singular; therefore: au mousseline, or perhaps aux mousselines.
- je ne c'est pas* (Sports). What the writer means is "I don't know," but the French c'est means it is, and the present tense first person of savoir (to know) is sais, which sounds exactly the same; therefore: je ne sais pas.
- au pair* "meaning an arrangement" (View). The French term au pair means on a par with, even with. So-called because au pair girls are accepted as being on a social level with their employer-hosts.
- de le mer* (Travel). The French le is masculine, mer feminine; therefore: de la mer.
- a guayavera shirt (Metro). The Spanish word is spelled guayabera (and pronounced that way).
- porquoi* (Travel). The French word is spelled pourquoi.
- ad nauseum* (Metro). The Latin phrase is spelled ad nauseam.
- wunderbar* (Sports). The German word is spelled wunderbar.
- chef de equine* (View). Two problems here: The French preposition de when followed by a word beginning with a vowel is abbreviated: chef d'equine; furthermore, the correct Olympic term is chef d'equipe, meaning chief of team. Equine is an adjective.
- parfumes* (View-Fashion 84). The French for perfume is parfum, and the plural is parfums.
- introduced his fiance (Calendar). She is presumably female; therefore: fiancee. But he is her fiance.

FRED HOLLEY

Style & Usage Report

July 31, 1991

These reports now include, when feasible, a more extended discussion of some points. Your comments on this one will be welcome. This report covers July 20-25.

LAY/LIE:

- when fog lays heavy. lies.
- [then] they lay down their palms. laid.
- [he] lay down his bullhorn. laid.
- the officers lay him face dwn. laid.
- the victim was laying in the street. lying.
- ordered him to lay on his stomach. lie.
- [he] lays dying. lies.
- [he] laid down and was hit. lay.
- These comparatively old examples are just as relevant as they were when they were first pointed out. The lay/lie confusion continues to plague our pages, and this is an attempt at clarifying the difference.
- The verb lay is transitive (taking an object); the verb lie is intransitive (not taking an object). (Note that the verb lie as in lying about one's record is entirely different and has nothing to do with these two verbs.)
- Lay* means to place in a recumbent position; the past participle and the past tense are both laid, and the present participle is laying. For example:

He is going to lay down his weapons; he has already laid his weapons on the ground; he laid his lunch on the table; he is laying out his plans for the future. Note that all these verbs have objects.

- Lie* means to be or to place yourself in a recumbent position; the past participle is lain; the past tense is lay, and the present participle is lying. For example:

He is going to lie on the sofa, he lies dying; he has already lain there awhile; he lay there for several hours, he lay dying; he is still lying there.

Style & Usage Report

July 24, 1991

These reports now include, when feasible, a more extended discussion of some points. Your comments on this one will be welcome. This report covers July 14-18 with a few samples from July 13.

ALLEGED:

—The words alleged and allegedly crop up in The Times far more frequently than they need to. Herewith a reminder based on the entry in the stylebook:

alleged. Use with caution. The source of any allegation must be specified.

Avoid redundancy. It is correct to say: Police alleged that Smith killed his wife. But not: Police accused him of allegedly killing his wife. A person is not charged with allegedly doing something; he is charged with actually doing it.

There are ways around the constant use of alleged and allegedly. It is perfectly correct to say police said that something happened. There is no need to repeat the word alleged in each sentence of a paragraph that consists of a prolonged allegation.

When a person is arrested, he is arrested on a charge of something or on suspicion of something. He may also be arrested in connection with a crime, such a holdup or a burglary. He may also be held for questioning in connection with something.

Do not use alleged as a routine qualifier.

Bear in mind that the use of alleged does not protect against a libel suit.

Style & Usage Report

Oct. 3, 1991

Because of my other obligations, this report is more sporadic than most recent ones. It includes items from as long ago as Sept. 12 and as recently as Sept. 25.

NAUSEATED/NAUSEOUS:

- There's a meaningful difference, and the two words are occasionally confused in our pages. A few examples, old and new:

both travelers were nauseous (Travel). nauseated.
becoming nauseous (Valley View). nauseated.
the sight made them nauseous (Orange County). nauseated.
made him nauseous (Metro). nauseated.
he felt nauseous (Metro). nauseated.
made him ill and nauseous (Orange County). nauseated.
making the pilot nauseous (Metro). nauseated.

- Nauseated* describes how you feel when you suffer nausea; nauseous describes the circumstances that made you nauseated:

I was nauseated by the nauseous odor.

FACTS:

- State Museum of Science and Industry* (Metro). It's the California Museum of Science and Industry.
- the state Occupational Safety and Health Administration (Business). Although it's abbreviated as Cal/OSHA, the state body is the Division of Occupational Safety and Health.

Style & Usage Report

Oct. 9, 1991

This report covers the period from Sept. 26 through Oct. 1.

PROF./PROFESSOR:

- This entry is little more than repetition of what the stylebook says, but there seems to be enough uncertainty over when to use the abbreviation and when to capitalize to justify it.
- When the title alone is used before a person's name, it should of course be both abbreviated and capitalized: Prof. John H. Jones. Lesser titles are preferably spelled out following the name: John H. Jones, associate professor of history.
- When the name of the professor's subject or his university affiliation is used with the title before his name, the title should be spelled out and lowercased:
 - physics professor John H. Jones*
 - USC professor John H. Jones*
 - USC physics professor John H. Jones*
 - department chairman John H. Jones*
- If the professor holds an endowed academic chair, the title should be capitalized, regardless of its position: Shirley K. Jones, Walt Whitman Professor of English.

FACTS:

- Grover's Corner [in "Our Town"] (Calendar). Corners.
- Defense Secretary Richard Cheney (TV Times). He prefers—and we call him—Dick.
- Connecticut's Fairfax County* (Business). Fairfax County is in Virginia; in Connecticut, it's Fairfield County.
- finishing an eight-hour graveyard shift* when she received the call . . . at 11:44 p.m. (Metro). A graveyard shift is "a shift that starts during the night, usually at midnight." This wasn't one.
- Rep. Barbara Boxer (D-Calif.) (Calendar). Greenbrae.
- judges, one in the wig and gown of a British lord, . . . (Orange County Calendar). British judges wear wigs and gowns in their own right; members of the British peerage may wear gowns, but not wigs.
- persona non grata* (TV Times). The phrase is: persona non grata.

GRAMMAR, STYLE AND USAGE:

- the judging criteria is different (Ventura County Life). are.
- the same bacteria that has . . . (National). Make it either bacterium or have.

FRED HOLLEY

Style & Usage Report

Oct. 17, 1991

Another sporadic report. This report covers Oct. 2-4, Oct. 6 and Oct. 9.

IMPLY/INFER:

- Another frequently confused couple of words. There is a tendency to use infer when imply is intended. To imply is to suggest something; to infer is to pick up on such a suggestion.
- When you imply something, you are saying something indirectly and expecting that your listener will understand. If a person says he is going to skip lunch, he may be implying that he is also going to leave work early; if you hear him say it you might infer what he is implying.

His coolness implied not only his anger but also his effort to keep it under control.

She inferred from his coolness not only his anger but also his control of it.

His appearance implied that he intended to be a candidate; at least, that was what most of the press corps inferred.

- When you imply something, you are making an implication; when you infer something you are making an inference.

FACTS:

- introducing the High Skills, Competitive Workforce Act ((Business). The measure hasn't been passed yet, so it's a bill, not an act; and it's lowercase.
- working their bodkins off* (Ventura County Life). Bodkins are needles or knives. How you would work them off is a baffler.
- Gen. George G. Marshall (Book Review). The World War II general's initial is C. (for Catlett).
- Rep. Ron Packard (R-Oceanside) (San Diego). Carlsbad.
- The Great Wall of China . . . 33,000 miles long (Book Review). This is greater than the circumference of the Earth. The Great Wall is 1,500 miles long.
- Moses ben Nahman*, the philosopher known in Hebrew as Nahmanides (Travel). His Hebrew name was Moses ben Nahman [son of Nahman]; Nahmanides is the Greek form of the same name.
- a preying mantis (Ventura County Life). The insect is a praying mantis, so called because its forelegs are held as if in prayer.
- Carl Covitz, secretary of the Business, Transportation and Housing Agency (Metro). He isn't secretary of the agency; he's secretary of business, transportation and housing.
- Louis W. Sullivan, secretary of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (Op-Ed). He isn't secretary of the department; he's secretary of health and human services.
- The* Los Angeles Times (Calendar). We don't cap the in the full name; but it's The Times.

GRAMMAR, STYLE AND USAGE:

- looks like it's packed (Metro). as if. The same error appeared in both View and Sports on the same day.
- the L.A. basin (Metro). Capitalize: Basin.
- differences in [some] rocks versus [others] (San Gabriel). between . . . and.
- city of angels* (Sports). Capitalize nicknames: City of Angels.

- work day* (San Diego Sports). workday.
- year-long* (Travel). yearlong.

ANOTHER DANGLER:

- Unlike Philharmonic concerts, patrons* are . . . (Calendar). This compares concerts and patrons, which makes no sense. Make it: Unlike those at Philharmonic concerts, patrons. . . .

FRED HOLLEY

Style & Usage Report

Nov. 28, 1991

Another sporadic report. These examples are drawn from the period from Nov. 14 through Nov. 21.

AVERSE/ADVERSE:

- [she's] not adverse to the job (Food). averse.
- This example from last summer illustrates the problem: The spellings are very much alike, and the two words are frequently used as if they were synonyms. Averse means reluctant or disinclined; adverse means unfavorable or harmful or opposed.
- He has been working under adverse circumstances and he is averse to continuing to do so.
- Bill Bryson, author of "The Facts on File Dictionary of Troublesome Words," which is the best recent book of its kind, suggests that an uncertain writer might think of the words aversion and adversary that would direct him to the proper adjective. Both words are preferably followed by the preposition to when appropriate.
- She is not averse to having a drink before dinner.
- The conditions were adverse to his receiving his degree.
- He had an adverse reaction to the drug.
- They were not averse to attending two meetings in one day.
- The incident affected him adversely.

FACTS:

- "Down Argentina Way" [1940 movie] (Orange County Calendar, Nov. 20). Argentine.
- she found [him] sitting in a pool of diarrhea (Westside). Diarrhea is a condition, not a substance. This should have been excrement or, perhaps, body waste.
- State University of New York at Stonebrook (Valley Calendar). Stony Brook.

GRAMMAR, STYLE AND USAGE:

- like* in March (Ventura County Life). as.
- it cannot only slow the progress . . . but also reverse it (Metro). This not modifies the only, not the can; can not only.
- we will comprise half the work force (Times Magazine). compose or constitute.
- the only criteria . . . is . . . (Orange County View). criterion.
- who was diagnosed with* [AIDS] (Westside). Conditions are diagnosed, not people. Make it: whose condition was diagnosed as AIDS.
- the stock market dove (Orange County Business). dived.
- memorabilia that includes . . . (Calendar). include.
- the width . . . or the legroom are . . . (Travel). is. (Or, perhaps better: and instead of or.)
- convinced* him to play football (San Diego Sports). persuaded.

Style & Usage Report

Dec. 6, 1991

Another sporadic report. These examples are drawn from the period from Nov. 22 through Nov. 29.

DEFUSE/DIFFUSE:

—Two more words that are too often confused:

A pipe bomb was diffused (Orange County). defused.

—That is a fairly old example but it's a good one. To diffuse means "to spread out or disperse in every direction; spread or scatter widely." To defuse, originally meaning to remove the fuse from an explosive device, has come to also mean "to render harmless . . . to make less tense, as by diplomacy":

The rumors were rapidly diffused throughout the city.

His quick action defused a dangerous situation.

The ambassador's words defused the Middle East crisis.

FACTS:

—Julius Caesar . . . the Roman emperor (Ventura County). Julius Caesar was never emperor; the first emperor was his adopted son, Augustus.

—U.S. Rep. Duncan L. Hunter (R-San Diego). (Metro). Coronado.

—Rep. Peter Stark (D-Calif.) (Business). He prefers—and we use—Pete, and he's from Oakland. (His first name is actually Fortney; Pete is a nickname.)

—each chapter builds on the next (View). This seems like an impossibility. Surely it should be: builds on the previous one.

—New York's Stonybrook University (Travel). It's the State University of New York at Stony Brook.

GRAMMAR, STYLE AND USAGE:

—amalgamous (View). amalgamative.

—his chain of . . . stores is in shambles (Business). a shambles.

—like Jacksonian Democrats were . . . (Book Review). as.

—looks like it could have . . . (OC Live!). as if.

—blacks comprise 2% of [the] population (Ventura County). compose or constitute.

—they comprise the . . . front line (Orange County Sports). compose or constitute.

—Thanksgiving day (Metro). Capitalize: Day.

—the federal department of Housing and Urban Development (View). Capitalize: Department.

—[poet] e. e. cummings (Calendar). The poet uppercased his own name, and his widow has written that he preferred it that way: E. E. Cummings.

—guesting . . . in Brussels (Calendar). Try to avoid the use of guest as a verb.

—talking about him being a one-term governor (Metro). his.

—each of whom held key Senate posts (Metro). a key Senate post.

—bacteria . . . permeates (Valley Sports). permeate.

—one of those . . . systems that promises . . . (Business). promise.

- super-power* (San Diego Business). superpower.
- tea pots* (Calendar). teapots.
- doing there own thing (San Diego Calendar). their.
- tranquility* (Calendar). tranquillity.

UPDATE:

- In keeping with the Second College Edition of the dictionary, our stylebook calls for lowercasing yule and yuletide. The Third College Edition, however, which has finally been entirely inserted into our Coyote listings, prescribes Yule and Yuletide. Please make the change in your stylebooks.

MEA CULPA:

- It is particularly embarrassing to make a factual error while pointing out another one. The Nov. 21 report, while correctly saying that Hoover was not president in 1921-22, managed to goof by saying he was elected president in 1932. It was, of course, 1928 when Hoover was elected. Ouch.

Style & Usage Report

Dec. 12, 1991

This reports covers the period from Dec. 1 through Dec. 5.

NERVE-RACKING; RACK/WRACK:

—The confusion of rack and wrack, particularly in the word nerve-racking, is one of our most common errors. Since June:

nerve-wracking (Calendar). nerve-racking.
recession-wracked (Business). recession-racked.
nerve-wracking (Orange County Sports). nerve-racking.
wracked by scandal (San Diego). racked.
wracked with despair (Times Magazine). racked.
wracked by gang violence (Southeast). racked.
budget-wracked (Opinion). budget-racked.
wracked by crises (Book Review). racked.
tensions wracked the city (View). racked.

—A rack is a framework. We hang things on racks, and people were stretched on them as a form of torture in the Middle Ages. Our nerves are racked; we are racked by the recession, by gang violence, with anguish or despair:

He was racked with indecision.
. . . body all achin' and racked with pain.

—A wrack is a wreck. The word is rarely used today. Some dictionaries describe it as an alternate spelling of rack, but it is best regarded as acceptable only in the phrase wrack and ruin.

FACTS:

—Department of Transportation Secretary Samuel K. Skinner (National). Skinner is secretary of transportation, not secretary of the department.

Style & Usage Report

Jan. 10, 1992

This report is a very sporadic one: It draws from the period from Dec. 21 through Jan. 3, but not all days.

MASTERFUL/MASTERLY:

- There's a difference and it's worth noting:
- Masterful* means domineering or commanding:
He took charge in a masterful manner.
His masterful approach led the company to new heights.
- Masterly* means highly skilled or expert:
His writing showed a masterly knowledge of the language.
The painting had the masterly touch of a great artist.

Style & Usage Report

Jan. 15, 1992

This report covers the period from Jan. 4 through Jan. 9.

CEMENT/CONCRETE:

- The difference between these two nouns has become increasingly blurred, but there really is a difference and, as William Safire has written, "a worthy distinction deserves all the protection it can get."
- Cement* is a powdery substance used in the making of concrete, and its use as a synonym for the latter is "a loose usage," Webster's New World tells us. It is also sometimes an adhesive substance, as in rubber cement.
- Concrete* is a building material made of cement, sand, gravel and water.
- There are other uses:
- Cement* is sometimes a verb meaning to unite or to solidify; it is sometimes figurative: Her kind words cemented their relationship.
- Concrete* is sometimes a figurative adjective: The investigators could find nothing concrete to charge him with; a concrete noun.

FACTS:

- Robinson Jeffer's . . . adaptation (Calendar). The poet's name was Jeffers; the possessive form is Jeffers'.
- Congressional Medal of Honor* (Valley View). It's just the Medal of Honor.
- Assemblyman Dick Floyd (Metro). Richard E.
- Sen. Ed Davis (R-Northridge) (Metro). Santa Clarita.
- the "Star-Spangled Banner" (Orange County Sports). It's "The Star-Spangled Banner."
- a U.S. District Court judge (Business). a U.S. district judge.
- Walter W. Rostow, adviser to . . . Kennedy and Johnson (Opinion). His first name is Walt; he was named for poet Walt Whitman.

GRAMMAR, STYLE AND USAGE:

- an* homage (Ventura County Life). a.
- Gone is the malaise, the . . . bickering, the cynicism and . . . insulation (Book Review). are.
- sounds like he thinks . . . (Orange County). as if.
- the air is avulsed with . . . buzzing (Orange County View). Avulsed means pulled off or torn away; it doesn't make much sense here.
- both men are each other's biggest fan* (Calendar). each man is the other's biggest fan.
- graduating high school* (Metro). graduating from high school.
- the graduate from Fullerton College (Orange County). of.
- taking a toll on the city's psyche (Metro). of.

Style & Usage Report

August 17, 1993

This report on Suburban section usages covers the period from August 12 through August 15.

SEQUENCE OF TENSES IN INDIRECT QUOTATION:

- This slightly modified reminder from the stylebook: When the main clause is in the past tense, the dependent clause is generally in the past tense as well.

President Clinton said he went to Denver to meet with the Pope.
 He said he would go to Bosnia but decided against it.
 He added that his Denver trip had convinced him of the justice of his cause.

- NOTE that in these instances the action or condition in the dependent clause is in some way completed.
- There are major exceptions to this rule, and a great deal of newspaper writing is in the realm of the exceptions. For instance, the dependent clause following a verb in the past tense should be in the present tense for expressions of:

The habitual. He said he goes to the post office every day.
 (If we said went, the reader would think he had stopped going.)

The customary. He said there is always a picnic on the Fourth of July.
 (If we said was, the reader would think there no longer is one.)

The characteristic. He said his opponent moves skillfully and intelligently under pressure.
 (If we said moved, the reader would think that this is no longer the case.)

The general truth. He said honesty is the best policy.
 (If we said was, the reader would think that this is no longer the case.)

The continuing. He told me that the men are at work on the bridge.
 (If we said were, the reader would think that work had stopped.)

- NOTE that all these exceptions, in one way or another, imply a continuing condition or action.
- The present or future tense should generally be used after a past tense governing verb when the reference is to a point of time still felt as future at the time of writing:
 He said he is going (or will go) to Somalia.
 (If we said was going or would go, the reader would get the impression either that he had gone and returned or that he had not gone at all.)
- NOTE that in this case, too, a controlling factor is the idea of continuing. He continues to intend to go.

GRAMMAR, STYLE AND USAGE:

- City Attorney Greg Stepanicich (Westside). Spell out his name, Gregory, and abbreviate title: City Atty.
- Orange county (San Gabriel). Capitalize: County.
- the Deloitte and Touche report (San Gabriel). Note ampersand: Deloitte & Touche.
- [he] did not move in full-time at . . . (San Gabriel). Hyphenate the adjective, not the adverb.: full time.
- inositol* (South Bay). It's a trade name; capitalize: Inositol.
- [school] principal Sylvia Rousseau (Westside). Capitalize: Principal.
- director of Recreation and Community Services (Southeast). Lowercase: recreation and community services.

Style & Usage Report

September 22, 1993

This report covers Suburban usages from September 16 through September 19.

SAID/SAYS:

- This reminder from the stylebook:
- When an individual is quoted, directly or indirectly, the attributive verb is usually in the past tense.
He said, "I am tired of politics."
He said he is tired of politics.
- But when a quotation, direct or indirect, is a habitual comment, the attributive verb may be in the present tense.
He [often] says, "I am tired of politics."
He [often] says he is tired of politics.
- This use of a habitual present is sometimes overdone, and it is often preferable to avoid it or to confine it to indirect quotation. But it is permissible, and there is no compelling need to force it into the past tense to agree with other words in the same story.
- There is a tendency to strain to avoid the attributive said, replacing it with more colorful terms. There is no need to strain. Said is usually the preferable word.
- Do not create false attributives:
Wrong: "Hello," he smiled.
Wrong: "You're out of luck," he frowned.

GRAMMAR, STYLE AND USAGE:

- looked like he had stepped out of . . . (Long Beach). as if.
- the Crown Prince himself (South Bay). Lowercase when not followed by a name: crown prince.
- Diagnosed with . . . leukemia . . .*, [he] is seeking . . . (South Bay). Conditions and diseases are diagnosed, not people. Here make it: His condition having been diagnosed as . . .
- the submarine USS Guardfish* (Long Beach). the U.S. submarine Guardfish.
- each of the city's 14 franchise areas have only one cable operator (Westside). has.
- Solomon contends he has . . . (South Bay). contends that he . . . This verb almost always needs that.
- Murphy contended the SEC was . . . (Westside). contended that the . . .
- the clinic contends the county is . . . (City Times). contends that the . . .
- Congresswoman Jane Harman* (South Bay). U.S. Rep. is preferable.

SPELLING:

- schools Supt. Joseph M. Carillo (South Bay). Carrillo.
- screenwriter Richard Freidenberg (Glendale). Friedenberg.
- Torrance Mayor Katy Geisert (South Bay). Geissert.

Style & Usage Report

Nov. 3, 1993

This report covers Suburban usages from Oct. 28 through Oct. 31.

ALTERNATE/ALTERNATIVE:

- This reminder from the stylebook:
- Alternate* means occurring by turns or to take turns doing something. An alternate is a person who substitutes for another. Alternative means providing a choice, one of the things to be chosen or the choice itself.
- Use alternate or alternately to express the sense of one after the other.
- Use alternative or alternatively to express the sense of one or the other.

FACTS:

GRAMMAR, STYLE AND USAGE:

- When he heard the news, Hacking said: "I was bouncing off the wall. It was like a dream come true." (San Gabriel). The colon here suggests that Hacking said this when he "heard the news"; but he obviously said it later and is recalling how he reacted at the time. Hence, a comma rather than a colon: Hacking said, "I was. . . ."
- the cut and cover technique (Westside). Hyphenate: cut-and-cover.
- female graduates from coeducational schools (Westside). of.
- [school] principal Lupe Paramo. (City Times). Capitalize: Principal.
